The Bigelow Stocks.

No doubt many of our readers have received a circular from the Mesers. Hayden. Stone & Co., advising them that now the time has come to purchase the stocks of the so-called "sigelow Syndicate" and to such no doubt the following, taken from the Boston Transcript of Wednes day last, will be very interesting reading:

"Messrs. Hayden, Stone & Co., in a cir cular devoted to the 'Bigelow' mining stocks, express the opinion that there is considerable money to be made in buying these shares. They give a table of cur-rent prices compared with those of last summer's 'boom,' which we average:

This is an immense shrinkage-practically 50 per cent—and it well may be has been a sharp discipline and results of the 'policy' pursued in management explain it, but it is about time to consider if bed rock is not reached. To return to the circular, Messrs, Hayden, Stone & Co. say: 'Last year's great boom in this group of stocks was due primarily to a remarkable development of value in Boston & Montana. On the strength of that ubstantial improvement a wild speculative rise followed in the entire group. Very naturally there has been a reaction. and one which has been fully equal to the rise, except in the case of Boston & Montana shares. At the moment the speculative feeling toward these shares is very bearish, and as indiscriminately so as the feeling was bullish about a year ago. It is a good time for the buyer of courage and means to take hold. Be-lieving in the honesty and ability of the management of the mines mentioned above, an ir cognizing that these prop-erties are mines and subject to all the risks attendant upon mining property, we think that at going prices the risks are well discounted; while the good management, present and prospective profits and dividends are not fairly recognized."

IT MAY NOMINATE M'KINLEY.

It Stirred Congress Up to a High Pitch In Consideration of the Armenian Questi and of Struggling Cuba In Fact, We Are an Impulsive People.

Washington, May 9 - [Special]—We don't talk much besides politics in the national capital now. Though the session of congress is believed to be coming to an end within the month, every eye is turned to ward the great national conventions to meet at St. Louis and Chicago. The Mc-Kinley managers are as confident as ever, but it is noticed that the leading members of the opposition are keeping up their nerve. Last Sunday night three of them by preconcerted arrangement, came on with statements that Mr. McKinley die not have enough votes to nominate hir and probably could not get them. The chief spokesman for the opposition was Mr. Clarkson, who is generally called General Clarkson, though all his ways have been those of peace. He was once first assistant postmaster general, and that hung the title to his name. No better man for the task of bracing up the drooping nerves of the auti, McKuley messall has been such that he was the control of the such was the second to the s the task of bracing up the drooping herves of the anti-McKinley men could have been selected. Clarkson is a remarkable inter-viewer. He knows just what to say and how to say it, and if he had been educated for the law, which he was not, he could scarcely have made a better special plea for a guilty criminal than he made for the rather shake case of the operation has rather shaky case of the opposition last Sunday night. He has nerve, rhetoric, understanding of the little phrases which strike the popular imagination and great powers of generalization.

Mr. Clarkson's Phrases. Clarkson has produced two phrases durcorks on has produced two phrases during the anteconvention campaign which are likely to live long after the year 1896 has passed into history. When, some months ago, he described ex-President Harrison as a "receptive candidate," he produced a phrase which has become immortal. It was one of these set assume. mortal. It was one of those apt sayings which catch the popular imagination which catch the popular imagination, which put in one or two words an idea which every one has understood, but has not been able to express, save with long, cumbersome sentences. For all time to come, probably, this phrase will be used to characterize men who occupy a position similar to that which has been General Harrison's concerning the numination to be made at St. Louis. In his interview last Sunday Clarkson spoke of this as "an smotional campaign," and that phrase is also destined to have a long life. It is conceded by every one, the McKinley m as well as the opposition, that it strikes the nail on the head. The McKinley campaign has been an emotional one, sure enough, and has served to vindicate the accuracy of the statement which I have often made in these dispatches that nothing is so strong a factor in our political life as sentiment. It is sentiment that has made McKinley's name a household word throughout the country, and any politician will tell you that the same sentiment is likely to make him president of

This phrase reminds me that we have had an emotional campaign or two here in Washington. Congress went wild on the Armenian question and passed resolutions asking the president to transmit to the asking the president to transmit to the kings and emperors of European countries the protest of the American people against continuance of the horrors in Asiatic Tur-key. What became of those resolutions? They were pigeonholed in the state depart-ment by order of President Cleveland. They were never sent to the monarchs of the old world, as congress had intended The Cause of Free Cuba.

Then came the Cuban campaign. That was emotional, too, and in direct response to public sentiment. So nearly unani-mous were the people of the United States that something should be done to help the Cuban patriots that only a half dozen votes against the Coban resolutions could be mustered in the senate, and only an insignificant handful in the house. Yet noth-ing has come of these resolutions, Mr. Cheveland processing to make an effort to mediate between Cuba and Spain and to bring about reforms in the colony in his own half hearted way. The worst of it is the emotion appears to have disappeared from congress itself. The word 'Cuba' is now rarely heard in conversation with enators and representatives. They are thinking about other things, in which they or their constituents have a more direct interest. So far as the average congress-man or senator is concerned, the Cubar resolutions which made so much noise a few weeks ago have now become almost a joke, and many men are asking themselves why it was they became so much excited on that occasion.

We are an emotional, a sympathetic, a sentimental people, but our impulses are nearly all in the right direction. Among the few public men who are still devoted to the cause of free Cuba there is a great deal of dissatisfaction with the attitude assumed by the president. He has not as yet done anything effective in aid of a set-tlement of the Cuban problem. Every move he has made was after a full unde standing with the representative of the Spanish government at this capital. Nothing has been done that was offensive to Spain. It is extremely unlikely that any good will come out of the policy of mediation and reform. Poor Cuba!

Yet wholly trustworthy information are wholly trustworthy information comes hither that the outlook in Cuba is an absolutely hopeless one. The rebellion has gone so far that peace can come to the island in only one way, and that is through independence. The time will come when the government of Spain, and the governments of the United States and England as well, will be forced to receive the control of the Contro as well, will be forced to recognize this fact. There can be no permanent peace and presperity in Cuba until the process of evolution has been perfected there and constitutional government secured. If this rebellion fails, it will be followed by an-other. If that fails, still another will come along in due season. American property owners in Cuba whose sympathies at the outset of the present rebellion were wholly with Spain, because Spain represented law and order and a chance for these men to make money, have realized the imperative necessity at last. They admit that inde-pendence is the only solution, the only thing that will bring an enduring period of peace, quiet and prosperity. While at first they wanted Spain to triumph, they are now anxious for the success of the in-surgents. The view which the surgents. The view which these men take points the way to the manifest destiny of that unhappy island.

Jolly Nellie McHenry Tuesday

Other Items of Interest Picked U About the Metropolis of the Copper Country.

The 9-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs rog, of Tamarack, was drowned on Sat urday afternoon shortly after 2 o'clock, while swimming in the Tamarack dam. The little fellow had evidently got beyond his depth and sank suddenly beneath the surface. He came up twice and on the second time be called for help. Some boys who were a short distance from the place, at his cry, ran to his aid. One of the boys, named Alex Gipp, waded out in the water and managed to bring him to surface, at considerable risk to himself. He was still alive but expired as the boy was carrying him to shore. He was taken to the engine house near the dam and medical aid summoned in the meantime, those at the engine house tried every means possible to revive him. Dr. Gregg and pharmacist Vincent, of the Tamarack hospital soon arrived and worked over the body for fully an hour with no better results.

The body was then removed to his home at Tamarack. The funeral was held this afternoon, services being held at the Norwegian Lutheran church.

Jolly Nellie McHenry.

Jolly Nellie McHenry, who has long been a popular favorite in this county, begins an engagement at the Opera House, May 12, when she will be seen in a new farce called "The Bicycle Girl." The piece is described as a cyclo-comedy, a satire on the bicycle craze and the new woman, and is said to be full of fun, song and dance. The farce is in three acts. The first shows the rooms of the Brianwood bicycle club, with Grace Fordyce, the bicycle girl as the president. She is the orphaned daughter of a rich bicycle manufacturer, who has left her his entire fortune. She is an up-to-date giri, a speculator in Wall street and founder of the bicycle club. She is wooed by two suiters-one, a Baron Bykes, an American, who masquerades as a French noble man. Bykes' father and Grace are riva bicycle makers. Byke thinks that by wedding Grace that the two firms can be consolidated. The other suitor is a student, who resolves to become a sport in order to win the affections of Grace. The econd act shows a clambake of the bicycle club. The third and last act shows a bicycle meet at the race track, and ends with a bicycle race. Nellie McHenry will be seen as Grace Fordyce, the bleycle girl; John Webster, as Baron Byke; Charles Morrison, as Stephen Forsters, the student. Henry Laurant, as John Potiphar: James McGrath, as Jasper Hardtack; Laura Bennett, as Mrs. Potiphar, Julia Glover, as Rose Dimplecheek; Ethel Delnore, as Berlina Courtland: Rose Crouch, as Clarice Andrew: and Marie Gerson, as Alice Hollywood.
